

Hello,

I sent an email yesterday (I don't expect that you saw that already) but realized I sent direct to Julie not to the "landscape" email so I wanted to forward again. My question is regarding incorporating sampling options for production builders who install the same design repeatedly so that we don't have to audit every install. I am attaching two pdf documents to help illustrate one thought on how the grouping could work. If nothing else, allowing the jurisdictions to come up with their own acceptable sampling interpretation would be ideal.

Like HERS testing this can be a very effective means for managing the installs while not burdening all involved with timely and costly inspections that would yield the same results repeatedly.

Karina Guerrieri

Sr. Project Manager
Standard Pacific Homes